

How Christians Respond to Violence | Trent Thompson

How can Christians condemn violence now when God commanded violence in the Old Testament?

1. We need to distinguish between types of violent acts.
2. We need to affirm God's right to judge.
3. We need to understand more about the context of a violent act.
4. We need to see the bigger picture of God's plan.

How Christians Respond to Violence | Trent Thompson

How can Christians condemn violence now when God commanded violence in the Old Testament?

1. We need to distinguish between types of violent acts.
2. We need to affirm God's right to judge.
3. We need to understand more about the context of a violent act.
4. We need to see the bigger picture of God's plan.

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS

1. Take some time as a life group to pray again for victims of violence and their families in our nation.
2. Why is grief and lament the right first act of Christians regarding violent acts in our world today?
3. Have you read texts like the one we looked at in Deuteronomy 20 before? How have you shaped your thoughts around them?
4. Was there anything pointed out in the sermon which was new to you? Anything which you found particularly helpful or with which you disagreed?
5. Why is it necessary to begin processing this question from the affirmation that God has a right to judge and always does so rightly?
6. How does Jesus saving people through the cross speak to the objection that God doesn't or shouldn't ever command acts of violence?

DISCUSSION QUESTIONS

1. Take some time as a life group to pray again for victims of violence and their families in our nation.
2. Why is grief and lament the right first act of Christians regarding violent acts in our world today?
3. Have you read texts like the one we looked at in Deuteronomy 20 before? How have you shaped your thoughts around them?
4. Was there anything pointed out in the sermon which was new to you? Anything which you found particularly helpful or with which you disagreed?
5. Why is it necessary to begin processing this question from the affirmation that God has a right to judge and always does so rightly?
6. How does Jesus saving people through the cross speak to the objection that God doesn't or shouldn't ever command acts of violence?